What's so great about Chad Johnson, #85, of the Cincinnati Bengals? Just five years into his career and he is already becoming a household name.

Chad: I Can't Be Stopped is the first book about the energetic wide receiver whose zany endzone celebrations have landed him over $100,000 in fines and into the hearts of football fans nationwide.

Chad is known for his flamboyant playing style and trash talking. But that's the man on camera. Who is he or rather how is he when the camera's put away?

He's a practical jokester who mailed Pepto Bismol to various Cleveland Brown's players before the big game. He also wandered the halls of his high school only to be found helping painters paint his school building.

Being raised fatherless left room for several different men and two very special women to shape this hyperactive class clown into the wide receiver that "no-one can cover."

Find out what really happened in the locker room at halftime during the 2005 playoff game.

Who does he call at 3 a. m. when he can't sleep?

The most important woman in his life—where does she live?

Who's credited for saving his football life?
